“Your Dream Dress”, If you follow some simple rules that I will outline below, you will find the perfect dress that will make you look like a princess on your special day. And don't worry most dress shops are trained in helping you select the right dress for your body shape.

- Choose; a V-shaped neckline, it is very flattering and gives the illusion that your bust is just the perfect size, your curves will be in all the right places.

- Avoid; high necklines as this style as this style can make you look out of proportion and too busty, while over plunging necklines gets you unwanted attention and is not appropriate for a wedding situation.

- If you are busty you may want to choose a dress like this as it balances out the proportions of your figure very nicely.

Just be sure to try on many different styles before you choose. Ball Gowns are recommended for the full figured and the curvy busty body shapes.

- A strapless gown will give your figure the perfect symmetry, remember a good choice in lingerie will give extra help and support to your bust.

- This classic look is stunning on a curvy shape and will hide a few extra pounds very well.

- This look will hide a big bottom well.

Empire waistlines are recommended to you if you are petite slim or do not have a defined waistline. Sheath style gowns are also recommended to you if you are slim & petite.

- Choosing this neckline will give the illusion of being taller, if you are short this is a great choice.

- Avoid wearing a full ball gown style dress because you will look even smaller in it.

- This is a good choice for a spring wedding in the south.

Here are some beautiful choices for the slim bride.

- This type of top will give you a perfectly proportioned figure if you are small busted this will hide that.

- This classic look is stunning for a petite lady with larger breasts.

- This look will hide a big bottom well.

A-line gowns are recommended for most body types except for women who do not have a defined waistline.

- Try on many different wedding dresses.

- Avoid; dresses with seams or patterns running across the mid section of your dress and avoid accessories like scarves and ribbons around the tummy area, the less emphasis there the better.

- If you are busty you may want to choose a dress like this as it balances out the proportions of your figure very nicely.

Most dresses in this style have their seams running vertically, these seams create a slim line to your figure and flatten the tummy area, and as the bridal gown flares out from the waist-line it shows perfect proportions and symmetry.

Neither the A-line or the princess has a defined waistline, the princess style do have vertical panels that help to slenderize the shape.

• This classic look is stunning on a curvy shape and will hide a few extra pounds very well.

• This look will hide a big bottom well.

Choose; a long sleeved bridal gown if you are self-conscious of your areas and don't want to show them off - it's perfect for an autumn or winter wedding.

- This is a great choice for a fall or winter wedding and sets a an elegant nighttime theme.

- Avoid: sleeveless gowns without a shrug, wrap or decorative jacket.

- A high neckline like this one will make you look taller.

For a warmer climate, the other option is to choose a sleeveless dress and cover your arms with a decorative shrug, wrap or pretty laced jacket. You'll look like a celebrity, all the emphasis will be on you and your lovely dress.

- If you are on the slender side and have full arms this is a great choice for you.

- This classic look is stunning on a curvy shape with full arms and will hide a few extra pounds very well.

- This look will hide a big bottom well.

Casablanca

www.casablancabridal.com

I ordered a Casablanca gown for my wedding. Most of the wedding gowns out there are pretty nasty (in my opinion). I wanted something that was simple, classy, and elegant, and Casablanca gowns are all of those things. (In fact, the only gowns I wanted to try on when I went dress-shopping were Casablanca gowns!) As far as cost is concerned, Casablanca gowns are mid-priced, but they look a lot more expensive than they actually are. You can also customize your Casablanca gown to meet your personal needs (for example, I had the neckline altered on my dress). The extra customization costs very little and I was extremely pleased with the results. I encourage all brides-to-be to visit a Casablanca retailer before shopping anywhere else!

Below is a mix of some real life reviews of actual customers and their experiences with buying there dream wedding dress. A few designers we have listed adds from there wedding site, as a result of simply not being able to locate real people and there reviews, I am sure I will locate these reviews and when I do I will update there reviews.

Eden

www.edenbridals.com

Eden Bridals has been designing and manufacturing wedding apparels since 1988. Our product line includes bridal gowns, bridesmaids dresses, junior bridesmaids dresses and flower girl dresses. Our design concept is to incorporate latest fashion to our gown designs, ensure high quality fabrications and offer them at the best prices to our brides. Because acquiring a wedding gown is a highly personal process that requires the expertise of an authorized dealer, we do not sell our gowns over the Internet (see our Buyer Beware). You'll need to experience our products in person to see the quality and workmanship we put into each wedding gown, assembled by hand at our own factories. Eden Bridals has won several industry awards for its products, value, and services.

Essence of Australia

www.essensedesigns.com

What sets Essence of Australia dresses apart is the use of exquisite beading. Swarovski crystals, diamantes, and various other beads, in a full range of sizes and colors, are used to intricately decorate the wedding gown. You can expect to be wowed by Essence's wedding dress styles and trends, which also makes use of fine embroidery patterns of gold, silver, and platinum. Your dress need not be your run of the mill white; yours could be a vibrant, sparkling, and colorful wedding dress of your dreams.

Pronovial

www.pronovias.com

The Pronovias flagship store is, far and away, the best bridal gown shopping experience you can imagine. First of all, the building is just gorgeous and very well-designed on multiple levels with spacious dressing rooms - I'm sure there were other brides there at the same time, but the way it is set up, you feel like the only bride in the building. Before entering the dressing room, the saleslady spent time going through the look-books with me and marking down which dresses I liked, while also making suggestions based on my preferences. She set me up in a spacious and modern dressing room overlooking 52nd Street, served us all champagne, and gave me a clean white robe to wear between try-ons. The samples were all spotlessly clean, and she brought in dress after dress after dress for me to try. There was never any pressure to like a dress - if I didn't like, it was just on to the next one. She even brought in a couple silly, high-fashion type dresses for me to try on, just for fun and to take pictures (YES, they let you take pictures! Amazing!!). Even though it was only my first day gown shopping, and I initially was adamant that it would be a try-on day only, I ended up going back to Pronovias later that day to purchase The Dress. I chose a gown from their permanent trunk show floor, so it was 10% off, and to top it off - alterations were FREE. What really sold me on Pronovias is that they shun the shady practices in which most bridal salons engage. They are honest and upfront about their prices, alterations are included (whereas most similar salons charge $300+), photos are allowed, and there is none of that scary MUST MAKE THE SALE pressure from the salesladies.

www.pronovias.com
